Construction of the Hall Building. The ground breaking ceremony for the Henry F. Hall Building was on April 17, 1964, the cornerstone was laid by the Honorable Paul Gérin-Lajoie on May 8, 1965, and the building was officially opened October 14, 1966. It is named after Dr. Henry Foss Hall (Principal of SGWU 1956-62). In addition to the financial contribution of the Québec Government, contributions of more than $6 million were made to the Building Fund Campaign for the construction of the building. This building was planned soon after the opening of the Norris Building, by which time it was obvious that it was too small for the quickly expanding enrolment of Sir George Williams University, and it lacked specialized facilities. The Hall Building, designed by Ross, Fish, Deschénes and Barrett, is a 1960s high-rise university building constructed of pre-fabricated stressed concrete, which was built to house, in a single compact structure, a Computer Centre, specialized science laboratories and language labs, as well as extensive classroom space. HA 529 a)

In 1964 this building was named after Kenneth E. Norris, the Principal of SGW from 1936-56. When SGWU separated from the YMCA in 1966, the financial settlement included the YMCA retaining full ownership of the Norris Building, which was attached to the Drummond Street YMCA Building with passage between the buildings on three floors. From that time SGWU, and later Concordia University, rented the premises which housed the SGW Main Library, and a variety of academic departments and administrative services, including student accounts, and parts of Registrar's Services. On August 31, 1992 when the Webster Library moved to the new J. W. McConnell Building, Concordia left the Norris Building, which still remains vacant. P101/P14

YMCA Building Dominion Square, located on the site of the present Sun Life Building. This building, designed by American architects Fuller and Wheeler, was built by the Montreal YMCA and was occupied by them from 1891-1912. The building included a swimming pool and gymnasium as well as enlarged and improved facilities for the educational program, including University Extension courses which the YMCA began offering in 1892. I010/P346

Construction of the YMCA Building on Drummond Street, October 1911. This building, with decoration inspired by Classical Revival taste, opened in 1912, and was built at a cost of $540,206. Enrolment in the YMCA educational programs greatly increased in the Drummond Street building, and by 1926 the "Educational Department" became the coeducational Sir George Williams College. A twelve-storey annex to this building was built in 1930-31, and it included residence accommodation and expanded facilities for Sir George Williams, which by 1936 offered a full four-year College program, to both day and evening students. I010/P347

SIR GEORGE WILLIAMS

Site of the future Norris Building (ca 1954), the first building built especially for Sir George Williams University. The Norris Building originally had 33 classrooms, ten laboratories, and administrative offices. A sixth floor was added in 1959. The new college building was opened in 1956 to meet the growing needs of Sir George Williams, which had been granted a university charter in 1948. In the 1940s the College had begun to spill out of the YMCA Building on Drummond Street into rented quarters. HA 529 b)

YMCA Building, Victoria Square. The Montreal YMCA was founded in 1851 and until 1873 it operated out of rented quarters. This building was the first in Montreal built by and for the YMCA, and it was occupied by them from 1873 until 1891. The building contained an assembly hall with a seating capacity of 600. The cost of the building and its furnishings was $60,000. It was in this building that the YMCA initiated evening classes in 1873-74. The education program begun at that time expanded rapidly, and by 1926 it became known as Sir George Williams College and Schools. I010/P349

Loyola Administration Building nearing completion of the third phase of construction, ca 1926. By 1916 the Junior and Refectory Buildings were completed, but the Administration Building was only two storeys in the central part and one storey in each of the wings. By 1921 the Administration Building was raised to three storeys, but it was not completed until 1927. By 1916 the Junior (now Psychology Building) and Refectory Buildings were completed, but the Administration Building was only two storeys high in the central part and one storey high in each of the wings. All three original buildings, and the Central and Chapel buildings, are brick faced with matte surface Greendale bricks, with Indiana limestone or terra cotta trimmings, and set on Montreal limestone. Further construction on the Administration Building was done in stages as funding became available. In 1920-21, one storey was added to the central body of the building, and two storeys were added to each of the wings, for a uniform three storeys, but it was not completed until 1927, when two additional storeys and the tower were added. In November 1963 there was a fire in the tower, but there was no structural damage to the building. The Jesuit community which administered and taught at Loyola lived on the second floor of the Administration Building until the move to the newly constructed Jesuit Residence on West Broadway in 1969. The parlour at Loyola College, corner of Bleury and Ste-Catherine Streets. Loyola College had its origins in the Jesuit-owned Collège Ste-Marie, where both French and English-language programs were offered, and a separate English classical program was established in 1888. It became a separate entity in 1896 when it moved into this former Sacred Heart Convent at the south-east corner of Bleury and Ste-Catherine, where it was housed until a fire struck in 1898. P013/P14

J. W. McConnell Building, 1992. Concordia University resulted from the 1974 merger of Sir George Williams University and Loyola College, and the McConnell Building was its first new building project. The building opened in September 1992 and houses the long-awaited library for the Sir George Williams Campus, the R. Howard Webster Library, the Leonard and Bina Ellen Art Gallery, Registrar's services, the bookstore and office space. 94-02

Aerial view of the Loyola campus during the third phase of the Administration Building construction. View from the north, facing Sherbrooke Street, ca 1926. Designed by Architects Peden & McLaren, the building is an ornate version of neo-Tudor style with decorative battlements, reflecting a re-working of English medieval architecture. P013/P8

Sod turning for the Vanier Library On July 17, 1963, Father F. W. Noll, S.J., Librarian Emeritus, turned the sod for the new library building, and the library was officially opened by Governor-General Georges P. Vanier on October 27, 1964. The original building is a three-story brick structure which could accommodate 150,000 volumes and 600 library users. In 1986, work began on a new addition and major renovations to the existing library building, and on December 15, 1989 the extension was inaugurated, doubling the shelf capacity and seating of the original building. The library is named after Major-General the Right Honourable Georges-Philias Vanier, Governor-General of Canada, 1959-67, and Loyola graduate of 1906. I002/P105

LOYOLA

Drawing by T. P. Slattery of the first Loyola buildings under construction on the Melon Patch in 1915. Construction of the west end campus of Loyola College began in 1913 on the site of the old Decary Farm, which had been purchased by the Jesuits in 1900. Construction was delayed because of lack of money, and the first students occupied the buildings in 1915, although it was 1916 before the move was complete. The original buildings included the Administration Building, the Refectory, and the Junior or High School Building (now the Psychology Building). I002/P3690

68 Drummond Street, the former Tucker School, on Drummond, south of Ste-Catherine, and later the site of the LaSalle Hotel, now the Hotel Europa where the young Loyola College moved in 1898 in the wake of a fire. A new wing was added immediately to accommodate the growing numbers of students, but shortly thereafter in 1900, the west end site was purchased where Loyola hoped to eventually build its own buildings. Loyola occupied the buildings until June 1916 when the move was completed to the new west-end campus, now the Loyola Campus of Concordia. P013/P2
